

ABOVE: KNUCKEYS Lagoon was a fringe camp in 1972 when the residents protested as the Prime Minister, William McMahon, drove down the Stuart Highway to open the Darwin River Dam. Read Basil Sansom's The camp at Wallaby Cross, 1980 for a description of their camp and also the critique of Sansom's book in Bill Day's thesis.

Above: Knuckkeys Lagoon Aboriginal Community cemetery, June 2009. Descendants and survivors of the original Knuckkeys Lagoon residents commemorate the martyrs who fought for land rights for their community.
