

Cheryl's book, We Have Bugger All, first published in 1974, is a well researched history that includes word-for-word transcripts of contemporary interviews recorded with Darwin activists, quotes from the newsletter Bunji and various media releases, including two petitions prepared and signed by Darwin Aboriginal people and an 'Application to enter the Northern Territory' given out to passengers at the Darwin International Airport. In addition, the paragraphs in bold print on page 9 are Cheryl's vintage contribution to the Darwin campaigns. The Kulaluk story is told in greater detail by Bill Day in his 1994 book, Bunji: a story of the Gwalwa Daraniki Movement, continuing from Fred Fogarty's trial to his sudden death in 1985 following Bobby Secretary's passing in November 1984. The struggle continues!

Bill Day

Darwin

2008

BELOW: Cheryl Buchanan at Fred's house in 1978

Above: Cheryl Buchanan with Violet Adam during a visit to Violet and Fred's house in 1978. The house was built by Fred on an island in the mangroves on Kulaluk land behind the suburb of Ludmilla, down from Fitzer Drive. Photograph by Adrienne McConvell (nee Haritos).

Right: Fred Fogarty (sitting), Bobby McLeod (centre) and Jack Phillips at a dance organised by the Gwalwa Daraniki at Bagot Aboriginal Community in 1973.

