

Ludmilla Creek

By Dr John Tomlinson

Too good to lose
too good to dam.

Yes Ludmilla Creek is too dam good to lose.
Kulaluk and the traditional owners hold in trust this beautiful creek with its Barra, salmon and mangroves and mud crabs and prawns and crocodiles and wallabies and water birds.
Developers should go and flood their own homes and leave Ludmilla Creek to the people.

Too good to lose
too good to dam.

Yes Ludmilla Creek is too dam good to lose.

(Poem inspired by a photo taken by Dr Bill Day of Dulcie Malimara fishing in the creek at low tide.)

Left: walking along the Kulaluk Beach to the creek, July 2009.

Right: Dulcie fishing in a branch of Ludmilla Creek at low tide, July 2009.

Below: Dulcie fishing at high tide, 1997. Below, right: Len Stewart casting a net at low tide, 1997.

